	Rea	d the following passage carefully and then answer the questions that follow.
	elec orga For theo	resentative democracy is a type of democracy whereby different groups in the community persons to represent them and give them full mandate to decide on their behalf in various and governance. In this regard, citizens see themselves as ruling through their representative example when a Member of Parliament participates in passing or rejecting a bill in Parliament retically he is obliged to do so having in mind the interests of his constituency. This is whating members of parliament or leaders is serious business.
	In repeople citizand deci	epresentative democracy systems, such as the one we have in Tanzania, once in a while a ble who qualify may participate directly in making decisions on certain issues. For example tens participate directly, by voting, in electing their district councilors, members of Parliamer the President. In many countries, citizens who qualify may participate directly in making sions over issues of great national importance. The commonly used method is the referendum mples of issues of great national importance include approving the national constitution, issue nion or federation with other nations and so on.
