It was the racing day and there were many contestants. "Look! I can see the Elephant and the Lion!" shouted the Antelope. "I can see the Goat and the Monkey!" cried the Zebra. "And I can see the Chameleon and the Hare!" cried the Snake. All the animals were excited. The Hare was so excited that he did not notice an animal holding on to its tail. Suddenly the race began. All the contestants began running as fast as they could. "Snake, let's climb to the top of the hill," said the Frog. "Then we can see how our friend Chameleon will compete among all these fast runners and we will also see the end of the race clearly."

The Hare ran faster than all the other animals. "Look! The Hare is winning!" cried the Snake. "But where is the Chameleon?" The Frog asked. "Can't you see him?" The Snake cried. "He's holding onto the back of the Hare!"

The Frog laughed. Just then the Hare reached the throne. He sat down on the throne, and called, "I'm the first on the throne! I'm the king of the forest." To the surprise of many, the Chameleon told the Hare that he had been on the seat before him. The Frog and the Snake were very happy, because their friend was the new king. "Let's go and celebrate our victory," they sang.
