2. Read the following passage and answer the questions that follow.

Understanding the effects of pesticides used in Agriculture on the environment is crucial in ensuring that there is environmental conservation.

Pesticides can be in the form of powder, liquid or gas. These protect plants or the environment from being attacked by pests. Ignorance on the effects of pesticides can cause great harm to the environment and there is a danger of upsetting the delicate ecosystem.

It is thus vital to promote environmental awareness and publicize effective conservation measures.

Armed with little knowledge many people have been misusing and mishandling pesticides, thus endangering the environment, man, animals, and plants. The common effects have been in the form of explosions, contamination of water sources and plants which are later consumed by humans and animals. Contamination of the ecosystem has consequently led to the imbalance in the relationship between animals and plants.

The factors often cited by experts which have led to the misuse and mishandling of pesticides include illiteracy, negligence, poor documentation and information systems, poor disposal techniques and lack of technical know-how, ignorance, the absence of an appropriate guiding policy and insufficient extension services.

QUESTIONS:

- (a) Write the title of this passage.
- (b) Is the author totally against the use of pesticides? Explain.
- (c) According to the author in what forms can the effects of pesticides be seen?
- (d) What is an ecosystem?
- (e) What suggestions would you give in order to avoid the misuse and mishandling of pesticides?
