SECTION B (40 MARKS)

4. Answer ALL questions in this section. Read carefully the following passage and then answer the questions that follow.

The education provided by the colonial government in Tanganyika and Zanzibar had a different purpose. It was not meant to prepare young people for the service of their own country. Instead it was aimed at imposing colonial values and to train few individual Africans for the service of the colonial state such as junior clerks and officials. Colonial education emphasized individualism and not cooperation in society.

Colonial education encouraged attitude of human inequality and the domination of the weak by the strong especially in the economic field. It did not transmit or transfer our traditional values, knowledge and attitudes from one generation to the next.

Since independence action has been taken by the government of Tanzania to change all that. Firstly, the racial differences within the education system itself have been abolished. Discrimination based on religion has also been abolished.

There has also been a very big expansion of educational facilities such as schools. As a result the number of children going to school has greatly increased in both primary and secondary schools and also in colleges. This is something we can be proud of. Above all, the education provided in all our schools now is much more Tanzanian in content. Our education system encourages social goals of living and working together for the common good. This means that the education system of Tanzania emphasizes the spirit of cooperation and not individualism. It stresses equality of all human beings and discourages attitudes of inequality, superiority and discrimination of any kind. All our young people who go through our schools should acquire such good values and attitudes of self-reliance and desire to serve the nation. They should be responsible citizens who will work hard to develop Tanzania"
