SECTION B (50 MARKS)

4. Read the following passage carefully and then answer the questions that follow:

All persons born in Tanzania or naturalized in Tanzania are citizens of Tanzania; that is to say, there are two ways of acquiring Tanzanian citizenship, one by birth and two by naturalization. Citizenship by birth is acquired by being born in Tanzania. It is quite possible, however, for one to gain Tanzanian citizenship at birth even though he or she is born abroad. Two basic rules are applied to determine citizenship; one, the law of the soil where born, two the law of the blood to whom born. In the first case any person born in Tanzanian embassy or by a Tanzanian citizen in a foreign country is a citizen. However, children born of foreign diplomatic officials are not citizens.

Naturalization is the legal process by which a person acquires a new citizenship sometimes after birth. For example, a foreigner can acquire citizenship after staying in Tanzania for a certain period. The immigration law explains how one can acquire citizenship in Tanzania by naturalization. Not all the people who live in Tanzania are citizens. Some of them are foreigners.
